Professional Profile

Rachael Lawrence is an independent physiotherapist offering neurological rehabilitation, with a specialist interest in stroke, and both adult and child acquired brain injury (including cerebral palsy). Furthermore, Rachael provides rehabilitation for a range of medical conditions such as amputees, complex orthopaedic injuries and musculoskeletal injuries. She also undertakes workplace assessments, DSE risk assessments and sickness absence management.

Professional training was completed at Leeds School of Physiotherapy graduating in 1992, returning to her home town of Huddersfield to commence a mixed rotation, gaining experience within various physical and mental health settings. Rachael very quickly developed a passion for rehabilitation and chose to specialise within neurological conditions both in the NHS and private settings.

During this time, Rachael has developed her professional skills working within neurological disorders, specialising in assessment and holistic treatment and recommendations. This is a complex area that requires specialist skills, for example, therapeutic handling, spasticity management, specialist equipment as well as being aware of the medical complications and risks factors that often accompany this diagnosis. Rachael has worked with this client group for the last fourteen years, working closely with occupational therapists, speech and language therapists, nursing teams, rehabilitation consultants and neuropsychologists providing expert rehabilitation both within in-patient rehabilitation environments and within the community.

In addition, working within the medical legal setting has provided opportunities to develop skills working with clients who have suffered complex injuries and often present with challenging rehabilitation needs. Rachael's skills as a physiotherapist offer an innovative and holistic approach to providing specialist assessments and goal setting. Rachael describes herself as an effective practitioner who enjoys patient interaction and is always looking for a new challenge. Rachael can utilise the combination of expertise and experience with an energetic outlook into the practise of physiotherapy to provide first class rehabilitation to every patient.

Rachael enjoys all aspects of her clinical work and she can undertake ergonomic assessments for individuals and on behalf of companies and employers. She provides detailed reports and recommendations to highlight measures which may reduce commonly encountered work-related musculoskeletal disorders. Rachael also undertakes DSE risk assessments and provides recommendations in line with current legislation, Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992.
